The Editing Process Cont'd

All writers aren't created equal, which is why different editing levels (light, medium, and heavy) exist to suit the individual needs of each client. Because editors don't know exactly what level of editing is needed to reconcile whatever inconsistencies or errors may be present in a document until he or she digs deep into the text, Johnnie Girl Publishing has established a price range, as outlined in the chart on page one, which shows what a project may cost depending on the actual level of editing that is applied.

*Note: The estimates in the price chart cover the process outlined in Figure 1 on page one. If it is determined that a document, after having gone through the initial round of editing, requires further editing and or input from the writer, then additional fees will apply.

Payment Policy

Clients will be invoiced after services rendered and payment is due upon receipt. New clients must sign a project agreement prior to commencement of services. Checks, money orders, and PayPal are acceptable forms of payment.
